

Aminul Ahmed MD PhD

I studied pre-clinical medicine at Corpus Christi College in Cambridge and moved to GKT in London for my clinical studies. I was fortunate to get a place on the MD/PhD program at GKT and completed my thesis in the field of axon guidance at the MRC Centre for Developmental Neurobiology, London. After qualification, I enrolled on the academic foundation program in South London and following that I moved to the south coast in 2007 as the first Academic Clinical Fellow in Neurosurgery in Southampton. My current research interests focus on endogenous stem cells following TBI. I am currently one of the junior Specialty Registrars at the Wessex Neurological Centre in Southampton.

Outside of medicine, I am a footballer, both playing and keenly supporting Portsmouth FC. I was once even a football referee! I enjoy restaurants and reading fiction such as Garcia Marquez.
